three runs to Owingsville's none.
At the end of the seventh inning
the game stood 5 to 1 in favor of Salt Lick. In the eighth inning Owingsville rallied and made three runs. Salt Lick failed to score in when Owingsville went to bat, the score was four to five in favor of Salt Lick. The Owingsville boys succeeded in making two base hits.

out the intense suspense lasted but a moment when a fortunate hit by

OUR FAR-FAMED

KENTUCKY DERBY

Men and Women of Renown From All Parts of the World Come to Louis-

of This Historic Race.

CABINET MEMBERS AMONG THOSE IN ATTENDANCE
THIS YEAR

Few of us native Kentuckians realize, perhaps, what a truly magnificent world event the Kentucky Derby has come to be.

Year by year, it has grown steadily in popularity, until now it tops all other sporting events on the calendar; thereby advertising the state as millions of dollars' worth of space to the public prints could not possibly do, besides attracting periodically hosts of people who spend their money freely and greatly benefiting an industry of vast importance to Kentucky in particular—the breeding of the thoroughbred horse.

The list of personages who cheered the winner of the 1921 Kentucky Derby would stretch out far beyond the limitations of this little article. Suffice to say that it included several members of President Harding's cabinet, distinguished visitors from abroad and financial and commercial giants from all parts of the country; some of the latter the owners of horses that starred in the Derby and heavy investors in Kentucky estates; elaborately improved and privately maintained adjoining breeding establishments.

day, May 25.

St. Paul's parish church, in Stock Creek cemetery, the oldest church in Washington and one of the oldest in the United States, was recently destroyed by fire. The interior of the building, valuable memorial windows, old reliques and paintings were burned, and the four walls of the structure, erected in 1776, were all that was left of the historic edifice.

Among the historic relics destroyed by the fire was a large folio Bible, which was contained in a glass case near the chancel. The Bible was brought in 1727, was used for many years and was paid for by the congregation with tobacco. With the Bible, also destroyed, were two large folio common prayer books, the price for which, according to records at the church, was a quantity of tobacco which was to bring not less than "Id per pound."

The first Easter service to be held in the present territory of the District of Columbia took place at old St. Paul's church, Rock Creek, in 1791.

A requisition for the man has been honored by Governor Morrow.

UNITED STATES TO SIDE WITH ALLIES

Without It, Declares Arnold Bennett, He Will Be Unable to Get His Message Understood.

You cannot have good matter with bad style. Examine the point more closely. A man wishes to convey a true idea to you. He employs a form of words. That form of words is his style. Having read, you say: "Yes, this idea is fine." The writer has therefore achieved his end. But in what circumstances can you say, "Yes, this idea is fine, but the style is not fine?" The sole medium of communication between you and the author has been the form of words. The fine idea has reached you. How? In the words, by the words. Hence the fitness must be in the words. You may say, superfluously: "He has expressed himself clumsily, but I can see what he means." By what light? By something in the words in the style. That something is fine. Moreover, if the style is clumsy, are you sure that you can see what he means? You cannot be quite sure. And at any rate, you cannot see distinctly. The "matter" is what actually reaches you, and it must necessarily be affected by the style.—Arnold Bennett.

Rents High in Stone Age.

Southern California had apartment producers back in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, according to a scientific correspondence whose investigation of the stone age dwellings, hewn out of solid rock, has convinced him that keeping up an apartment never was a snap. At the entrance to one six apartment cavern he found lithographs, which he has deciphered to mean the rates for apartments as follows:

One abalone, one sun.

Two abalones, two suns.

Three abalones, three suns.

Twelve abalones, one moon.

Our correspondent figures that the home hunters among the Pungaha Indians had to pay at the rate of one abalone a sleep, or day, or 12 abalones per lunar month. The cave was the largest on the island and comprised the apartment house de luxe of that period. A short distance below the entrance to the stone apartment house the professor found a huge pile of empty abalone shells, proving that the landlord did a more or less rushing business.

THIS WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE

Brings a Ray of Hope to Childless Women

Lowell, Mass.— "I had anemia from the time I was six years old. My periods were very irregular. If I did any house-cleaning or washing I would faint and have to be put to bed. I lay down thinking every minute was not last. After reading your text-book for women I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It relieved the anemia.

Wash, and have never felt better than I have the last two years. I can work, eat, sleep, and feel as strong as can be. Doctors told me I could never have children. I was too weak, but after taking Lydia's Vegetable Compound it enabled me to give birth to an eight pound boy. I was well all the time, did all my work up to the last day, and had a natural birth. Everybody who knew me was surprised, and when they asked me what made me so strong I told them the great success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never felt better in my life." Use this testimonial at any time."—Mrs. ELIZABETH SMART, 142 W. Sixth St., Lowell, Mass. This experience of Mrs. Smart is surely a strong recommendation for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is only one of a great many similar cases.

Remarkable Strata.

While drilling a test well for oil on the Turkey Track ranch near Spearman, Tex., W. Scott Heywood and associates discovered a deposit of salt which is 111 feet thick. This salt strata was encountered at a depth of 500 feet, and what is said to be the most remarkable thing about it is that no water was encountered. Neither has there been any water found anywhere else in the well, which is now at a depth of more than 2,700 feet. The fact that there is no water above the salt bed makes the mining of the product an easy matter, it is said.

Right Thinking.

Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable to thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer.—Psalm, XY. 14.

Limitee of Submarine.

In a contribution to the submarine-versus-battleship controversy Adm. Sir H. Bacon, quoted in the Scientific American, states that because of the constructional conditions attending submarine design, a craft which navigates below water loses a large part of her surface fighting efficiency. Ton for ton, the fighting and scouting efficiency of a submarine craft of whatever size is only about 15 per cent. of that of the surface vessel. Sir George Owen Thorston, managing director of Vickers, Limited, gives figures to show that a submarine of 5,500 tons, having a surface speed of 20 knots, could mount an armament of only one 5.5-inch and one 3-inch gun.

Eating and Wasting Less Beef.

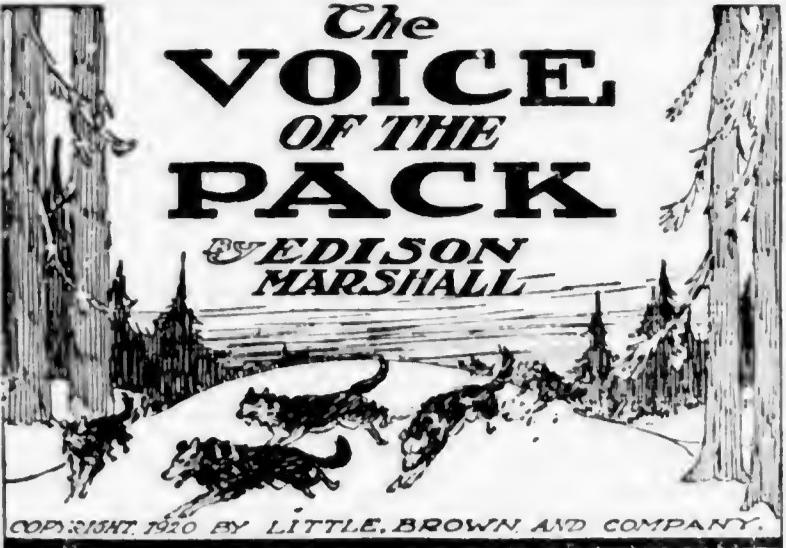

The United States Department of Agriculture reports that ten years ago the consumption of beef per head of the population in the United States was 78 pounds. Last year it was less than 56½ pounds. Beef consumption in the American household, it is stated, has undergone a great change during this time, especially in reducing waste.

He came steaming across the snow in mirth of the first degree. Very silently and swiftly he slipped off his snowshoes at the door. The door itself was unlocked, just as he had supposed. In an instant more he was tip-toeing in a dark, silent figure through the corridors of the house. He held his rifle ready in his hands.

"Tell me where it is?" Cranston ordered him. Again he pointed his rifle at Lennox's wasted breast.

"Tell you where what is? My money?"

"You know what I want and it isn't money. I mean these letters that I found on the ridge. The through trail, Lennox. I am learning that long ago, and it's time you learned now."

"You learned it because he was sick. He isn't sick now. Don't presume too much on that."

Cranston glanced up from his magazine to find that mind-numbing thing, the barrel of a rifle, pointed at his breast. Cranston was one of those race-muckers who shoot with both eyes open, and that means that he kept his full visual powers to the last instant before the hammer fell.

"I can't raise my arms," Lennox said simply, "one of 'em won't work at all, besides, against the doctor's orders."

"And I give you," Lennox replied, "one second less than to go to it!"

Both of them breathed hard in the quiet room. Cranston was trembling now, shivering just a little in his arms and shoulders. "Don't get me wrong, Lennox," he warned.

"And don't have any delusions in regard to me, either," Lennox replied. "Two stout worse pain from this accident than any man can give me while I yet live, no matter what he does. If you want to get or me and hammer me in the improved Cranston way, I can't defend myself—but you won't get a fair answer out of me. I'm used to pain, and I can stand it. I'm not used to fawning to a coyote like you, and I can't stand it."

Bui Cranston hardly heard. An idea had flared in his mind and cast a red glimmer over all the scene about him. It was instilling a poison in his nerves and a madness in his blood, and it was driving him, like fire, in his dark brain. Nothing seemed real. He suddenly bent forward, tensed, then straightened again.

"I probably felt that poison or after you went away, such as you and I, and you good stole the supplies from the forest station last winter, that probably induced me to give the orders. I didn't want thieves around my house, and I don't want them now. I don't want coyotes, either."

"And I don't want any such remarks out of you, either," Cranston answered him. "You still stand silent, and I suspect that slye border of yours will come back after he's through embracing your daughter in the snow, and find you in one place, otherwise not."

If I were in one piece," Lennox snorted like very quietly, "instead of a bundle of broken bones that can't lift his arms, I'd get up off this couch, unarm me as I am, and stamp on your lying lips."

But Cranston only laughed and tied Lennox's feet with a cord from the window shade.

He went to work very systematically. First he rifled Lennox's desk in the living room. Then he looked over all the mantels and ransacked the cupboard and the drawers. He was tounding and calm at first. But as the moments passed, his passion grew up.

"I wouldn't have to worry about those letters they would? They are somewhere in the house, and they'd be bound to find it. But the last isn't all that would be learned. You could maybe crawl out, but you couldn't carry the gun, and you couldn't carry the gun full of food. You're nearly eighty miles up here from the nearest occupied house, with two pairs of snowshoes for the three of you and one lousy pistol. And you can't walk at all. It would be a nice pleckle, wouldn't it? Wouldn't you have a fat chance of getting down to civilization?"

The voice no longer held steadily. It trembled with passion. This was no idle threat. The brain had already seized upon the scheme with every intention of carrying it out. The wilderness lay stark and bare, stripped of all delusion—not only in the snow world outside but in the hearts of those two men, its sons.

"I have only one hope," Lennox replied. "I hope, unknown to me, that Dan has already dispatched those letters. The arm of the law is long, Cranston. It's easy to forget that fact up here. It will reach you in the end."

Cranston turned through the door, into the kitchen. He was gone a long time. Lennox heard him at work; the crinkle of paper and then a painful sound around the walls. Then he heard the sharp crack of a match. An instant later the first wisps of smoke came curling, pungent with burning oil, through the corridor.

"You crawled from your couch to reach that gun," Cranston told him when he came in. "Let's see you crawl on now."

Lennox's answer was a curse—the word he'd look again at the glittering eyes. He secretly watched Cranston's further preparations: the oil poured on the rugs and furnishings, the kerosene placed at the base of the curtains. Cranston was trained in this work. He was taking no chances on the fire being extinguished. And Lennox began to crawl toward the door.

He managed to grasp the corner of the floor. He no longer smiled. The rodent features became intent; the eyes narrowed to envious, bright slits under the dark lashes. He went to Dan's room, searched his bureau drawer and all the pockets of the clothes hanging in his closet. He upset his trunk and pawed around old letters to the purpose. Then stealing like a weasel through the wilderness, he came back to the living room.

Lennox was not on the alarm when he left him. He lay instead on the floor near the fireplace and he met the passion-drawn face with entire calmness. His motives were perfectly plain. He had just made a desperate effort to procure Dan's rifle that hung

Naming the Second Week in May as "Kentucky Clean-Up Week."

WHEREAS, Official reports to this office show that 60 out of every 100 cases of sickness and 47 out of every 100 deaths which occurred in Kentucky last year—an average year—involved a total of 149,280 cases of sickness and 12,280 deaths, due to preventable diseases and a large extent to diseases caused, or greatly aggravated and made fatal by the pollution of the soil water and air by human and animal discharges and other filth, it is ordered that all this be done.

WHEREAS, Most preventable sickness and deaths are confined to people in early and middle life, often to young mothers and fathers, with the broken hearts and homes so often seen, and, to say nothing of the needless suffering and sorrow resulting from these diseases, causing a great loss to the State almost beyond estimation, sets apart and proclaims the second week in May, from Sunday, the 8th, to the succeeding Saturday, the 14th, as "Kentucky Clean Up Week", and appeals to the leaders of public opinion everywhere—health and civil officials, women's clubs, teachers, ministers, physicians, the press and all other welfare agencies, and to every family in every community—to enter organize for this work in such ways as will make it effective. It asks the officials of every city and town to at once have the street and alleys cleaned so that, with this done, they may furnish tennis and music to dispose of all accumulation collected on private premises and elsewhere, and to encourage the work for the entire week by offers of prizes for groups or classes doing it best.

Sandalwood Long Prized. Sandalwood is the product principal of the native state of Mysore, India, and the district of Coorg. Due to the development of the sandalwood oil extracting industry, the exportation of the wood from Madras has steadily declined, while that of the oil has increased. Sandalwood is the most famous of all scented woods, its use for perfume and incense dates back thousands of years. The inter-Greeks regarded it as one of their greatest luxuries, and no festivities were complete without it. Sandalwood figures prominently in religious ceremonies and burial rites in China and other oriental countries.

BILIOUS CHILDREN

Black-Draught, Long in Successful Use, Praised by an Arkansas Mother, "Soon Does Its Work."

Marmaduke, Ark.—Speaking of Theford's Black-Draught, which long stood in her household has become known as "the family medicine." Mrs. Mary E. Hill, of Route 1, this place, says:

"When the children get bilious, I give them a couple of good doses, and when we have sour stomach, headache, or any liver or stomach trouble, we take Black-Draught. It is an easy laxative, and soon does the work. I certainly think it is one of the best remedies made."

Black-Draught acts on the fated liver, gently, but positively, and helps it in its important function of throwing off waste materials and poisons from the system.

In thousands of households Black-Draught is kept handy for immediate use. Prompt treatment often half the battle, and will often prevent slight fits from developing into serious trouble.

Black-Draught is a valuable, meritorious, medicine, during more than 70 years of successful use, should convince you of the helpful effects obtainable by taking Black-Draught for liver and stomach disorders. THE U. S. ROYAL CORD

A famous tire—and a famous tread. Acknowledged among motorists and dealers alike as the world's foremost example of Cord tire building. Always delivering the same repeated economy after tire, and season after season.

The stripe around the sidewall is registered as a trade-mark in the U. S. Patent Office.

Almost every day you come across the man human enough to believe he can outguess the cut-price tag on "job-lots," "discontinued lines" and "surplus stocks."

His opposite is the hardpan car owner who sticks year in and year out to a standard brand as the only rational economy.

Many will remember the scarcity of U. S. Tires last year.

A hardship at the time, but a benefit now. There are no U. S. Tires to be worked off—no accumulations—no forced selling of any U. S. brand—no shipping of tires from one part of the country to another to "find a market."

There are 92 U. S. Factory Branches.

Each one gets its share of U. S. Tires. There is a broad, constant, even distribution of U. S. Tires always going on from these Branches to the dealer.
